To our readers

Have an opinion? Tell us!

Did the NBA make the right call banning Clippers owner Donald Sterling for life? Who should J.J. Abrams have cast in his revamp of 'Star Wars'? Is DCF better off now that its commissioner has resigned? We want you to tell us! There's no better way to have your opinion heard than sharing it with thousands of Metro and Metro.us readers. So send your thoughts to us at letters@metro.us. Please keep it as brief as possible, preferably fewer than 100 words, and include your name and contact info. Effort to rescue animals knows no boundaries Saved. As part of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Month, Metro shadowed the Animal Rescue League.

See more at www.metro.us

Animal Rescue League of Boston rescue team member Danielle Genter, bottom right, was tasked this week with rescuing a cat that had been stuck in a tree for four days. Rescue services manager Brian O' Connor, left, recently rescued this cat from a nail salon in Chelsea. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

From the ground, Danielle Genter could hear the cries of a cat about 30 feet above her in an old tree.

Genter, an Animal Rescue League of Boston rescue team member, bent down, carefully aiming and stretching her specialized slingshot in an attempt to send a weighted rope into the tree that she might have to climb to reach the cat.

Genter let go. The weight attached to the rope shot up with such force that it snapped the weak tree branches and eventually became tangled. It also evidently startled the cat, which climbed even higher.

The tree branches, Genter determined, wouldn't be able to support her and she would have to find another way to reach the animal, which had been there about four days.

Whether it's climbing scores of feet up a tree to reach a frightened cat, kayaking through a pond to an injured seagull or wading through inches of animal feces to rescue hoarded pets, the Animal Rescue League does it. Last year the rescue team, a group of five ARL employees who respond to calls for animals in need of help or surrender, assisted more than 3,400 animals.

Brian O'Connor, the manager of ARL's rescue services, said every day is different; team members don't know what the calls will be or where they will take place. The team last year responded to calls in 181 different cities and towns across Massachusetts.

"Sometimes we come in and we're dealing with hoarding cases, other times we're trying to chase around injured animals," O'Connor said. "We never really know which way the day is going to go when we start, but we're always ready for anything."

The nonprofit's dedicated rescue team is called in when local animal-control officers need an extra set of hands, when there is a need for the specialized tools the ARL has or for the team's experience with wildlife and technical animal rescues or many other reasons.

Sometimes, such as earlier this week in North Attleboro, concerned citizens call the ARL when no one else can help or reach an animal in need — like a cat stuck in a tree.

After about three hours of effort that included the help of a neighbor with a boom lift, a short rope climb and the reach of a catch pole, Genter was able to get the cat down. The apparently stray cat appeared to be healthy and was taken to the local shelter to see if it had an owner or if it could be adopted out, Genter said.

"We haven't left one behind yet," she said.

Month of action

See something, say something

As part of April's Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Month, members of the ARL and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals are showing support for a new bill dubbed the "PAWS Act," which would increase the penalties for animal cruelty — including hit-and-run accidents involving animals — as well as allow law enforcement to enter a home to protect an animal and create a statewide registry of animal-abuse offenders.

For ARL rescue members, it's also about letting the public know they can help.

"Somebody ... hearing something or seeing something and making the call — that's what we want people to do," O'Connor said.

Law enforcement

The organization also has a Center for Animal Protection led by Lt. Alan Borgal, who has worked with the ARL for about four decades investigating cases of animal abuse and neglect.

- Last year, the ARL law enforcement team led or assisted in 567 animal cruelty-related investigations including the infamous case of Puppy Doe, the dog found tortured in Quincy. The case pushed animal cruelty and rescue efforts farther into the spotlight.
- The law enforcement team also helped confiscate or facilitated the surrender of 173 animals involved in neglect or cruelty situations last year.

Embattled leader steps down as DCF preps for reform

Resignation. Olga Roche has ended her year-long leadership of the scrutinized child protection agency.

Citing a lack of public confidence in her leadership ability, the head of the Department of Children and Families has stepped down.

Health and Human Services Secretary John Polanowicz on Tuesday announced that Commissioner Olga Roche, who has worked in social services for 33 years, resigned amid emphatic calls from lawmakers that she vacate the post.

Roche / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Gov. Deval Patrick said he thinks it's "impossible for her to do the job that we've asked her to do in this environment. Whenever or whatever she does still causes folks to call for her resignation."

Calls for Roche's resignation were sparked by evidence suggesting that DCF mismanagement may have contributed to the deaths of three children under the agency's watch.

SEIU Local 509 spokesman Jason Stephany said Roche's departure paves the way for DCF reforms and investments.

"At DCF, we face a case load crisis that worsens each day," said Stephany. "Policy changes and accountability measures are desperately needed. Communication barriers and outdated technology continue to slow our efforts in the field."

DCF's Deputy Commissioner Erin Deveney will lead in the interim until a permanent replacement is hired.

Walsh announces incubator space, city digital officer

Tech push. Mayor Marty Walsh explained the new initiatives at a Chamber meeting.

In an effort to advance Boston's innovation and technology sectors, the city will soon have a new chief digital officer and business incubator space in Dudley Square.

In a speech to the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday, Mayor Marty Walsh discussed new initiatives and relationships.

"I believe that relationships are vital to our economic outlook. To be successful we need to build relationships with workers, communities and businesses," Walsh said.

Among the efforts announced was the housing of a business incubator in Dudley Square. Approximately 4,000 square feet in the Ferdinand Building will serve as a resource for start-ups seeking assistance with business services such as location, permitting, capital access and marketing.

Kicked out. NBA bans Clippers owner Sterling for life after racist remarks

The NBA banned Los Angeles Clippers owner Donald Sterling for life Tuesday, an unprecedented move in the league's history, after he was reportedly recorded making racist remarks.

Sterling may not attend any NBA games or practices going forward.

"Shortly after the release of an audio recording, the NBA commenced an investigation and that investigation is now complete," NBA commissioner Adam Silver said at a press conference Tuesday. "The hateful opinions [on the tape] are those of Mr. Sterling. The views expressed by Mr. Sterling are deeply hurtful."

Sterling's ownership of the Clippers has been under a microscope since late last week, when TMZ Sports released audio of Sterling telling female friend V. Stiviano that he does not want her to bring black people to games.

"It bothers me a lot that you want to broadcast that you're associating with black people,"

Sterling's representatives claimed the tape, which includes several remarks that have been deemed racist, had been doctored. / GETTY IMAGES

Fined

$2.5M

Sterling will also be fined $2.5 million by the league, the maximum amount allowed under the NBA collective bargaining agreement.

Sterling allegedly was heard saying on the tape. "You can sleep with [black people]. You can bring them in, you can do whatever you want. The little I ask you is not to promote it … and not to bring them to my games."

The suspension of Sterling was the first major decision that new league commissioner Adam Silver has had to make. Silver took over for longtime NBA commissioner David Stern in February. MATT BURKE, METRO

So just who are these upstarts? "Inside Llewyn Davis" star Oscar Isaac made the cut, as well as Andy Serkis, who is probably best known as Gollum in "The Lord of the Rings." We're looking forward to the press conference where Harrison Ford publicly hugs Chewbacca, and they fully put their differences aside.

V. Stiviano reads Metro

After the tapes of Clippers' owner Donald Sterling spewing racial slurs hit, his alleged girlfriend and leaker of those tapes, V. Stiviano, made her Instagram account public for the world to see. And if you haven't looked at it, you should. It is truly weird and obnoxious — she overuses hashtags more than a 13-year-old girl. After some sleuthing, we stumbled upon this shot of her reading Metro New York with the caption, "I'm searching for love in the classified section!" We at Metro want you to know we don't support people like Donald Sterling advertising in our classified section. She must have found him some other way. Maybe www.racistsugardaddy forme.com?

'Vampire' finale will freak you out

Interview. Ian Somerhalder talks about his climate change documentary and where he'd like to see his "Vampire Diaries" character go.

Ian Somerhalder has played vampire Damon Salvatore on the CW's "The Vampire Diaries" for five years, and he has an idea for what his character can do next: Stop climate change.

"I've already been here for 200 years, and I'm going to be here for another millennium — I might as well try and preserve this place. Things are just going to get worse," says Somerhalder of what his character should be thinking.

It's a cause close to the actor's heart. He recently participated in "Years of Living Dangerously," Showtime's documentary series that focuses on individual attempts to halt climate change. Each episode follows a celeb as he or she learns about those efforts.

But that doesn't mean the actor has left his day job. He enjoyed revisiting Damon's darker side this year, calling it his favorite since the first season and teasing that the finale is "intense."

"The way it ends, I never saw coming," Somerhalder says. "It's going to freak a bunch of people out."

Somerhalder's episode of "Years of Living Dangerously" airs on May 4 at 10 p.m., and "The Vampire Diaries" wraps up its season May 15 at 8 p.m.

Be warned, "Vampire Diaries" fans: The finale will be "intense."
WARNER BROS. TELEVISION ENTERTAINMENT, BOB MAHONEY, WBEI

Q&A

Bedtime with a vampire

Somerhalder had some fun with the initial design for Damon's bedroom, since the character is a bit of a womanizer. "We were talking about filming Damon's room, and I said, 'Oh, wow, you know what, his bed and his shower, they need to be able to fit at least eight sorority girls,' and it does." The designers took Somerhalder's advice to heart. "It's two king beds together. It's huge," says the actor. Cozy!

Tilda Swinton plays a 5,000-year-old vampire in Jim Jarmusch's "Only Lovers Left Alive." / GETTY IMAGES

On death and not dying

See more at www.metro.us

Interview. Tilda Swinton says one should keep a positive attitude about the end.

For someone who oozes rock star magnetism, Tilda Swinton is very approachable and friendly. She's upbeat even when discussing something as potentially grim as "Only Lovers Left Alive," Jim Jarmusch's oddball vampire movie. In it she plays Eve, a 5,000-year-old bloodsucker in a committed relationship with Tom Hiddleston's Adam, a brooding musician who is 4,500 years her junior.

On death

"I think that any piece of work that's about immortality is essentially about mortality. Any discussion about immortality will be about how we're all in a cul-de-sac. It's coming for us all. It's even coming for [Eve and Adam], sooner or later. I mean, the stars are coming down, eventually. Even in another 2,000 years, it will all end."

On the film as a positive relationship movie

"We wanted to show a long relationship between people who were really communicative with each other and really, really into each other. They're good for each other, so when one of them gets down, the other one can really help. That just feels real, and it feels previously unexplored. We're always seeing relationships start or we see them end. But we rarely see them just play out."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

An odd couple

On her on-screen lover

"Adam is [struggling with his] immortality. He wants a way out. He wants to go. It's too much for him. And [Eve] manages to retain her perspective, not by just surviving, but by being so wired into nature. Nature is constantly dying and being renewed. She's able to have that perspective because she totally accepts death. I would suggest that the more one accepts that death is on its way, the more relaxed one can be and forget about it."

The dirt on how to clean

Step one

Start here

Dellutri suggests manning up and tackling the garage. "A lot of people use the garage as the entrance to their homes — it's just the way it is nowadays," she says. "So get it clean: It's the gateway to your house and the dirtiest part of your house." Her decluttering rule of thumb? Toss everything (as in, everything) you haven't used in at least two years.

The garage is a good place to start your spring-cleaning frenzy. / PUBLIC

Spring cleaning.
We don't like it any more than you do, but it's time.

We're not sure who decided that the Advent of spring means setting aside a beautiful weekend to wipe down baseboards and dust light fixtures. But as there's no escaping spring cleaning — or the guilt of skipping it — we consulted Laura Dellutri, author of books such as "White Couch With Kids!?" and "Speed Cleaning 101" for her best tips.

Break it down

If you can't bring yourself to set aside an entire sunny Saturday, Dellutri suggests dedicating 30 minutes of a weekday to spring cleaning, dusting the furniture, organizing kitchen cabinets, Windexing windows or deep cleaning the bathroom before the weekend.

Three quick cleans

Have 10 minutes? Dellutri recommends knocking out these tasks.

1. Disinfect your light switches.
2. Place disposable liners in your fridge to make clean-up quicker.
3. Rub lemon oil on your shower doors so soap scum won't build up.

MONICA WEYMOUTH

Put little hands to work

Kids are eager to please, respond well to bribes and like gadgets. "Don't say, 'I'll just do it myself.' You're already not doing it yourself," reasons Dellutri. "Train the kids, and make it fun — sing songs and plan a kid 'date night' after." On her list of kid-friendly chores: hosing down the deck (or anything involving the hose), wiping out low kitchen cabinets and dusting railings.

LAURA DELLUTRI IS DOING HER BEST TO MOTIVATE YOU TO CLEAN. PROVIDED

PLUS
In the bedroom
Banish the dust mites
Dellutri's mite-free prescription:
1 Wash all of your bedding.
2 Buy a mattress cover designed to keep out dust mites. Tape over the zipper so they can't pry their way in.
3 Put pillows in plastic bags and place them in the freezer. Dust mites die in the cold.

Pro Mudders: Lend a hand.
GETTY IMAGES

The first step to getting over the wall is believing you can do it. / GETTY IMAGES

Tackle that obstacle race

Go. Tough Mudder's Nolan Kombol offers tips for beginners and pros alike.

Mud runs are pretty much the real-world version of "The Hunger Games," minus the whole killing each other thing. You've got to be fast. You've got to think on your feet. You've got to overcome any challenge thrown your way. And just like Katniss and Co. readied themselves for battle, you, too, will have to train your body (and your mind!) if you attempt to take on an obstacle race this year. We got advice for both first-timers and experienced pros from Nolan Kombol, head designer of the Tough Mudder course. For the sake of this story, just call him Plutarch Heavensbee.

Upcoming races

- MudMatch: May 17
- Tough Mudder: May 31, June 1
- Spartan Race: June 28 (at Mohegan Sun)
- Civilian Military Combine: June 21
- The Dirty Dash: July 26
- Spartan Race's Spartan Sprint: Aug. 9
- Mudderella: Sept. 6

Tips

For the newbies

1 Believe that you can do it. "That's the first challenge," Kombol says. "I've met so many people who said, 'I was scared to do a Tough Mudder.' But they tried it anyway and then said, 'You know, I lost 40 pounds to do this thing, and then I did it. And I was so happy with myself.' It's about committing and planning goals for yourself."

2 Prepare — to an extent. You can do lifts, pull-ups, squats and other traditional moves in or out of the gym, "but there will be certain parts of the course that stretch you and pull you in different ways," he says. Start your training a month or two before the event with body-weight exercises — those will prep you the best, he says. "It's about being prepared for different kinds of movements."

3 Hydrate. Your belly should have a little food in it right before your race, but you want to start hydrating well in advance. "I think that's a common mistake among athletes — not realizing that this starts the day before," he says.

4 Be comfy. You're gonna get cold, and you're gonna get wet, so be prepared with durable shorts, an undershirt, sunscreen (lots of it, SPF 30 or above) and shoes that'll weather any terrain. "A lot of first-timers don't realize just how long you'll be running through water, through mud, through gravel, through all sorts of tough terrain that actually impacts your shoes," he says. "It's nothing like a normal run."

Tips

For the experienced

1 Tackle the obstacles that gave you hell. Lose your way on the funky monkey last time? You're not alone: Roughly 60 percent of first-timers flail on the slanted monkey bar set over a pit of water. "I think for repeat Mudders, it's best to set personal challenges for yourself," he says. For example, you might aim to get across five rungs instead of three rungs this time.

2 Decide to help others. You've already kicked butt on this course, so why not help someone who's new to it? If your race isn't timed, you can spare a few minutes to lend a hand. "It's about spending not just one minute on top of a wall helping the person behind you up — it's about staying up there for five minutes and helping 20 people up," he says. Got a competitive streak? Again, make it a game for yourself. "I'll have little goals for myself, such as, 'Today I'm going to try to get four people up Everest.' 'I'm going to try to get 10 people over Berlin Wall.' A lot of it is about embracing the camaraderie spirit of what the event is."

The saints are marching in a little early

I've been largely ignoring the canonization of John Paul II because it matters little to me as a nonbelieving former Catholic. As someone who studied the canonization process in college, however, it bothers me. Typically, the church waits 50 years after a person's death to even start investigating sainthood. JPII died less than a decade ago. Combined with his poor record on the sex abuse scandal, it's evident that the church just wants to capitalize on the former pope's popularity in an attempt to regain followers and relevancy.

Don't let unscrupulous dogs lie

There should be a law that would punish liars who make promises for their personal gain (special products, insurance, etc.), and also politicians who make binding declarations and don't convert them into reality.

Climate cha-ching

Our planet has been changing for millions of years, and will continue to do so. Did factory and automotive emissions cause any of our ice ages? Warming trends? No! Mother Nature will do whatever she wants, solar panels and wind farms be damned. All this climate change nonsense is about one thing: MONEY! Pockets are being lined, mostly liberal pockets. Yes, the same people that think you have "earned enough!" Get real, don't buy into this hoax! Remember, some of the people screaming about global warming are the same ones who, in the 1970s, said we were heading for another ice age.

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Brewers (19-7)

The Brewers just keep on rolling, as they've won eight of their last 10 games to remain atop the rankings for a third straight week. Although its offense has been good, Milwaukee's pitching has been especially dominant with the second-best ERA in baseball at 2.56, trailing only the Braves. The Brewers will be put to the test this week with seven road games.

No. 2

Braves (17-7)

The Braves have won four in a row, and seven of their last 10 to distance themselves a bit from the rest of the NL East. Pitching has led the way as its 2.04 team ERA is the best in the NL by over half a run.

No. 3

Athletics (16-10)

Known for its offense, Oakland's pitching and defense has actually led the way to its 16-10 start and the most wins in the American League. The A's have allowed a league-low 85 runs to this point in the season.

No. 4

Yankees (15-10)

All the questions have been answered for the Yankees a month into the season as they sit atop the AL East standings, winners of six of their last 10. The bullpen has actually been a strength so far.

No. 5

Rangers (15-11)

It's been an up-and-down first month for the Rangers, as they've had some injuries but have still kept pace with the A's. Texas' pitching has delivered, as the Rangers are above the league average in multiple categories.

No. 6

Giants (15-11)

Consistent baseball has been the key for the Giants to start the season as, currently, they sit atop the NL West. San Fran doesn't stand out in any particular category so far; it has simply played steady ball.

No. 7

Rockies (15-12)

Winners of two straight and seven of its last 10 games, Colorado is one of the hottest teams in the NL, as it has overtaken the Dodgers in the NL West. Their 4.16 team ERA, which is good for 13th in the NL, will need to improve.

No. 8

Mets (14-11)

The Mets have won six of their last 10 and are right there at the top of the NL East. They've somehow managed to place seventh in the NL in runs per game despite hitting just .218 as a team.

No. 9

Dodgers (14-12)

Offense has been the issue in Los Angeles this past week, as the Dodgers have scored three runs or fewer four times. They've lost six of their last 10 but shouldn't be down long considering the talent on their roster.

No. 10

Nationals (14-12)

The Nats received a big blow this week when news hit that Bryce Harper would be out until at least July with a wrist injury. Nonetheless, Washington is second in the NL in runs per game.

No. 11

Cardinals (14-13)

St. Louis has slumped a bit as of late, losing six of its last 10 games and allowing the Brewers to open a sizeable lead in the NL Central. Their mark of 3.41 runs per game puts them with the second-worst average in the National League.

No. 12

Phillies (13-12)

Philadelphia has won two straight and six of its last 10 games but still remains the only team in the NL East with a negative run-differential at minus-10. On the plus side, the Phils have hit .259 as a team.

No. 13

Tigers (12-9)

Detroit is beginning to catch fire, winning six of its last 10 games to get atop the AL Central. Their offense has led the charge lately, as they've averaged 4.52 runs per game after starting the year in the bottom third.

No. 14

White Sox (14-13)

Winners of six of 10, the White Sox have continued their hot start by getting it done at the plate. Chicago has scored a league-leading 150 runs. They're also 9-5 at home this season.

Bruins using time off to get healthy

The Bruins had little trouble dismissing the Red Wings in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs but they could likely use all the help they can get in a second round series against the Canadiens most are predicting to go the distance.

Defenseman Dennis Seidenberg, who tore his ACL and MCL in late December, practiced Tuesday, and there are murmurs that he could play in this year's postseason should the Bruins continue to advance.

Rumors of forward Daniel Paille's return became fact Tuesday as he was medically cleared to play in the upcoming series against Montreal. Paille hasn't played since April 12 against Buffalo, when he looked to have suffered his third concussion of the season.

"I feel unbelievable right now and I want to continue that throughout this week," Paille told ESPN. "I feel fresh. I've been watching the games with the guys that haven't played and realize how good we've been, so it's definitely positive, especially going into this second round." MATT BURKE

Gronk optimistic about return

Patriots tight end Rob Gronkowski talked about his recovery from ACL surgery on WAAF Tuesday and sounded hopeful about the 2014 season. "I'm just improving every day right now," said Gronkowski, who had surgery on Jan. 9. "I'm working hard every day to put myself in the best situation so that I'm ready." Gronkowski declined to confirm that he'd be ready for the Pats regular season opener.

MLB. Rays, Red Sox both attempting climb back to .500 record

The Rays and Red Sox both have plenty of time to climb to the top of the division standings. But with May one day away, there's some urgency wanted from both squads to put together a substantial win streak.

Tampa Bay and Boston, currently both under .500, square off in the second game of a three-game series Wednesday at Fenway (7 p.m., NESN).

Boston will send Felix Doubront (1-3, 6.00 ERA) to the mound while the Rays will counter with Chris Archer (2-1, 4.11 ERA).

The Sox are in the early stages of an eight-game homestand, as they will also host Oakland this weekend and the Reds next week. MATT BURKE
